Learning and Training Complex

The Academy launched its learning and training complex with the view of providing educational facilities similar to the real life business situations and working conditions of banks, financial institutions and enterprises. The complex comprises 2 learning-training banks, a learning-training enterprise, a learning-training call-center, a learning financial-analytical center, CISCO academy, a dealing room for training interbank currency market specialists, a laboratory of SAS software development, specialized laboratory of IBM technologies. Usage of modern software as well as various training techniques enables students to fit into real-life working environments quicker and more effectively. Therefore, studying at the Academy bring together academic excellence, practical relevance and an international perspective.

At the learning-training call-centre students encounter new unexpected situations by the real-time negotiations with bank clients under supervision of the practicing bankers - partners of the Academy.

The learning-training banks take students beyond the classroom and challenge their problem-solving skills by letting students apply their studies to the environment of the real life bank.
Learning-training enterprise helps develop students' practical skills of planning, conducting analysis and performing monitoring functions which are vital for those working in Finance, Management, Accounting and Audit. It also enables students to match thorough theoretical knowledge gained at the Academy with real life practices of financial processes management.

The Dealing room equipped with a Thomson Reuters Eikon information terminal has been specially designed to train analysts capable of performing efficiently on the interbank currency market.

The Learning financial-analytical center possesses all the equipment and software necessary to translate theory into practice with insights from the faculty and real world experience. It helps to understand what it takes nowadays to be a financier or an auditor as well as what a modern executive desk is like.
